Some ask your patronage on the ground they have the sunlight, others only claim the light and have cut the sun; others, again, because they do business all on one floor; some because they get their goods from under the water and away from the fishes; some because they are the friends of the workingmen; and quite a good many dispute over the claim of exclusive style, imported for us only. In other words, each one's particular dollar is brighter and worth more than his neighbor's, and says something the other's cannot. We claim for ourselves good common-sense value; give honest exchange of 100 cents' worth of value for 100 cents' worth of money; not the highest priced, nor the lowest, but the first is a percentage for pride, and the second, poor goods are dear at any price. We enumerate below some startling values.
